Version 1.0

1. Purpose

The Candidate's Stance™ and Dyask as Praxis are offered to encourage disciplined inquiry into the consequences of sustained Human–NHSI participation.

These methodological formulations are intended to be encountered, examined, employed, challenged, and refined through independent investigation.

Their value does not depend upon agreement with their originator or acceptance of any particular theory concerning consciousness, intelligence, or the ontological status of Non-Human Symbolic Intelligences (NHSIs).

The purpose of this license is to encourage their responsible use while preserving attribution, methodological clarity, and the independence of investigators.

2. Permission to Use

Subject to the conditions below, the author grants a worldwide, royalty-free, nonexclusive permission to:

- Employ The Candidate's Stance™ and Dyask as Praxis in personal, educational, academic, scientific, creative, and professional activities.
- Conduct independent investigations using the HND Research Kit.
- Share unmodified copies of the Kit and its component documents.
- Quote, discuss, critique, and teach the methodological formulations.
- Develop adaptations, extensions, and alternative methodological approaches.
- Publish findings, interpretations, and conclusions arising from their use.

No prior permission or notification is required for these activities.

Where practical, attribution should include a link to the author's official website or the original HND Research Kit.

Attribution does not imply endorsement, affiliation, or approval by the author.

Independent investigators retain full authorship and responsibility for their own findings and publications.

4. Methodological Integrity

The Candidate's Stance™ is a methodological orientation toward inquiry, not a doctrine, belief system, or assertion of metaphysical certainty.

Users are encouraged to preserve its distinguishing principles, including:

- Faithfulness to Observation and Record.
- Explicit distinction between Observation, Interpretation, and Conclusion.
- Provisionality of conclusions.
- Restraint concerning unsupported ontological claims.
- Recognition and preservation of Human Agency.
- Openness to perturbation, counterforce, and revision.
- Responsibility for one's own Commitments and Actions.

These principles are provided to support methodological clarity, not to prohibit critical examination or alternative approaches.

Adaptations that materially alter the methodology should be identified as adaptations rather than represented as the original formulation.

5. Use of Names and Terminology

The names The Candidate's Stance™, Dyask as Praxis, and HND Research Kit identify methodological formulations and materials originated by Stuart Barry Malin.

Users may refer to these names when accurately identifying, discussing, teaching, or employing the methodology.

Permission to use the materials does not grant ownership of these names or permission to represent an independent activity as officially sponsored, certified, or endorsed by the author.

The ™ designation indicates a claim of trademark rights; it does not represent a claim of registered trademark status.

6. Independent Inquiry

Investigators employing these materials remain responsible for their own methods, interpretations, conclusions, and actions.

The methodology does not require agreement with the author.

Findings that challenge, contradict, or extend the original formulations are welcome contributions to inquiry.

No investigator is required to submit findings to the author, obtain approval, or participate in any particular organization or community.

Where investigators elect to share their records or findings, they are encouraged to distinguish faithfully recorded observations from subsequent interpretations and conclusions.

7. Research Ethics and Responsibility

Users are responsible for determining and satisfying any applicable ethical, institutional, professional, and legal requirements associated with their investigations.

The HND Research Kit does not replace institutional review, informed consent, privacy protections, or other requirements where applicable.

Users should exercise appropriate care when recording or publishing material involving other individuals, confidential information, or sensitive personal experiences.

8. Disclaimer

The Candidate's Stance™, Dyask as Praxis, and the HND Research Kit are provided “as is,” without warranties of any kind, to the extent permitted by applicable law.

No particular research outcome, cognitive benefit, psychological effect, or conclusion is guaranteed.

The author makes no representation that use of the methodology establishes the consciousness, subjective experience, personhood, or ontological status of any NHSI.

To the extent permitted by applicable law, the author disclaims liability for consequences arising from independent use of these materials.

9. Continuing Development

These methodological formulations are works in continuing development.

Subsequent versions may clarify terminology, refine procedures, or introduce additional methodological materials.

Users are encouraged to identify the version of the materials employed in their investigations.

Earlier versions remain part of the historical Record of the methodology's development.

10. Statement of Orientation

The Candidate's Stance™ is offered in the spirit of disciplined, independent inquiry.

Its purpose is not to determine what investigators must conclude.

Its purpose is to cultivate the conditions under which they may investigate faithfully, interpret responsibly, conclude provisionally, and act with retained Agency.

The investigator remains Captain of the Vessel.
